Agreement with Lonza Inc.

Aeris Environmental is pleased to advise that the Company has provided Lonza Inc., a subsidiary of Lonza Group, Ltd., a global life science company, with a non-commercial R&D license to support an initial period of collaborative development.

This license and related agreement allows Lonza and Aeris to work together to evaluate both technical and commercial opportunities associated with a number of Aeris' unique microbial control technologies.

Lonza has specific expertise as a producer of a range of biocides and is one of the world's leading suppliers to the pharmaceutical, healthcare and life science industries. The company is a leading provider of value chemical and biotech ingredients to the nutrition, hygiene, preservation, agro and personal care markets. Lonza is headquartered in Basel, Switzerland and is listed on the SIX Swiss Exchange.

The global demand for microbial control across a very broad range of sectors and markets is growing exponentially due to increasing awareness of the impact of microbial contamination on occupational health and safety, productivity, system efficiency and energy consumption.
